CLAUDE E. JACOBSON

New York, Dec. 31 (AP).—Except for favored sugars, oils, rails and specialties, stocks pointed lower in today's market.

The failure of the list to follow through on its Wednesday's rally was attributed partly to nervousness over the labor outlook and year-end adjustment of accounts for income tax purposes.

The volume was restricted after a brisk churning movement in the first hour. Near the final period trends were notably uneven. Transfers were around 1,800,000 shares.

Gains of fractions to a point or so were registered for Fajardo Sugar, American Crystal Sugar, South Porto Rico, Ohio Oil, Great Northern, Union Pacific, Southern Railway, Worthington Pump, International Mining, Howe Sound, Philip Morris, du Pont, Allied Chemical, North American, Deere, Oliver Farm, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Sharon Steel, Gimbel and Macy.

A shade either way were Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Anaconda, Cerro de Pasco, Standard Oil of California, Shell Union, General Electric, Consolidated Edison, Radio and American Telephone.

Doctor Describes
Condition of Pope

By The Associated Press

Vatican City, Dec. 31.—The condition of Pope Pius was described today for The Associated Press by one of his doctors in a written report which follows:

"The Pope suffered the breaking of a varicose vein in his left leg producing a wound which is still open and which will require much time to heal.

"At the same time he had an arterial obturation (blockage of the artery). An embolus (blood clot) closed an artery, thus impeding normal circulation of the blood and causing swelling of the left leg, light paralysis and very severe pain.

"These phenomena disappeared two days ago after normal circulation had been reactivated with appropriate diathermic (heat) treatments.

"What is most greatly pre-occupying is his general condition, especially the heart which at times gives indications of tiredness, and the functioning of the kidneys, which is greatly diminished.

"In consequence of these facts and very accentuated arteriosclerosis (hardening of the arteries), His Holiness presents the phenomena of asthma, weakness, and general exhaustion."

The physician added that although local circulation in the leg had improved, the pontiff's general circulation remains sluggish and there are clots in the blood stream which, if they reach the heart or brain, will be fatal.

The platform service of the Bible Training Class of Kingston at the Friends' Church last Sunday night was in charge of Mr. Phillips and Fred Fatum. The attendance was not large, but the meeting was very helpful and was enjoyed by all present.

The school entertainment last Thursday was a most enjoyable occasion. The school house was decorated for the occasion and the Christmas spirit was much in evidence. The pupils gave very cleverly the play, "Santa in Storyland." Santa Claus arrived at the close of the play and was received most joyfully by the children.

He gave to all the pupils and children a present of a box of candy and a hand shake. Later they gathered around the Christmas tree where were presents from the teachers to their pupils and pupils to teachers.

The last of the Christmas celebrations in Tillson was at the Friends' Church on Christmas Eve, when the choir and Sunday School presented the pageant, "The Story of Christmas." A large audience crowded the church. This proved to be a very beautiful pageant and was most effectively rendered. By those who had attended other times, this was pronounced by far the best Christmas entertainment ever given by this school. Thus ended the many Christmas celebrations in Tillson, which will exert their influence over our lives in the days to come.

Mrs. Seaman Gave Address to Women

Highland, Dec. 31.—Mrs. Valentine Seaman gave her talk on "Charm and Personality in the Home" at the December meeting of the Women's Club of Southern Ulster County Tuesday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. A. Loren LeFevre, at West Esopus. Charm, Mrs. Seaman said, is made up of many traits. There is the forgetting of self and things, of kindness, courtesy, tact, balance, poise, the keynote of "Be natural, be yourself," sincerity, take time to be polite, not to be snobbish and not to offend.

The speaker said people who are tense and irritable are not restful and her advice was to cultivate serenity. Mrs. Seaman took up the various heads and enlarged upon them. One's dress not ostentatious, but smart simplicity as to type and suited to the occasion and to pay the most for the gown that is most worn, to avoid fads; a few right clothes were most desirable and to build around them one's needs. She said it wasn't what we wore but what we said and what we did that counted. The voice and manner were to be considered, to avoid shrillness, mumbling, running words together, repetitions, avoiding malicious gossip, derogatory remarks about one's self, slang, but above all to be good listeners.

Her advice was not to discuss ailments, and as one knew the soft answer does work wonders. A bit of advice was not to relax too much and have let-downs before one's family, but to keep the party voice after the party dress is removed.

Mrs. Seaman closed with a talk of the home and asked four questions for consideration: Do the family like to stay in the home? Do the children like to bring their friends in the home? Do friends enjoy the home? Are invitations to the home accepted readily?

The home should have comfort, convenience and harmony. The home constitutes the best place for entertaining, the best place to develop one's powers of charm and where kindred spirits love to mingle. Such entertaining should be simple, suitable to the occasion, as the budget permits, and that the art of living brought out the finest quality of culture and was the jewel of good manners.

Mrs. Seaman extended an invitation to those present to visit at any time the Herald Tribune Institute with its model kitchens and clothe. It is under the Institute that she has been lecturing to women's clubs for the last three years. She is the daughter of a former member of the Diplomatic Service and is widely traveled, having lived in France and in the South. She has eight different subjects and the one selected by the Club of Southern Ulster has been one of the two most popular.

Following the address and singing of Christmas carols tea was served with Mrs. James Callahan and Miss Eliza Ives Raymond pouring. The table was festive with its tree and red candles and piled amid the greens were packages with gifts for each.

Among those present from Esopus and West Park were: Mrs. Ethel Cameron, Mrs. Osberg, Mrs. Alice DuMont, Mrs. Huth, Mrs. Mott, Mrs. McLain, Mrs. Allen, Mrs. Gross; and from Highland, Mrs. Charles D. Farnham, Mrs. Fred Lewis Vall, Mrs. D. S. Haynes, Mrs. Samuel D. Farnham, Mrs. James Callahan, Mrs. Harriet Ames, Mrs. John J. Gaffney, Mrs. Charles Schmidt, Mrs. Fred Schmidt, Miss Eliza Raymond.

THREE-YEAR LICENSES.

Commissioner Charles A. Harnett of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles, announces that effective January 2, all persons applying for original operators' licenses must submit their application accompanied by a two dollar fee. The licenses then issued will be valid for a period of three years. The commissioner states that this new measure will be of great convenience to the drivers of the state.

At various times, the commissioner asserts his attention has been called to the short duration of the present license. With this new type of license operators will be assured of a three-year period of driving uninterrupted by renewals unless they are convicted of violations of the vehicle and traffic law, which warrants suspension or revocation of their license.

With this new measure in effect the annual check will not be made on the record of court convictions of traffic violations, which was entered on the operator's license by the court or clerk of the court giving the date, offense, disposition, court and location. With this information on the license form the authorities could readily determine whether the applicant had been involved in court action during the year. From this data it could then be judged whether the applicant was a fit person to have his license renewed for another year. If the driver escapes suspension or revocation of his license, he will be able to continue for three years despite the fact that his record shows traffic violations and their attendant menace to the public.

That the new law will be of great convenience to the drivers of the state is unquestioned but wouldn't it encourage careful driving if this convenience were for law abiding operators only. That this convenience should be extended to all operators despite their record seems unfair. Wouldn't it be a big boon to the campaign to reduce the ghastly death toll on the highways if the careful and law abiding driver was rewarded for his efforts by extending his license?

The new law will not affect the present holders of motor vehicle licenses, until such licenses expire on May 31. At that time when applying for renewals they will receive the new three-year form. There will be no change at the present in the license issued to chauffeurs or junior operators. These will remain unchanged until further notice. The persons directly affected on January 2 are those who for the first time are applying for an operator's license.

UNEMPLOYMENT, BIG PROBLEM.

Unemployment remains at the end of the year, as it was in the beginning, the most crucial question facing the country. This is true despite the progress that has been made during the year in increasing employment. The best available estimates indicate that business has reabsorbed most of the workers who were laid off during the early part of the depression. This rise in employment, however, has failed to solve the problem, mainly because the number of available workers in the country has increased by several millions during the interval.

The size of the relief load that is still being borne by the government in spite of the increases that have taken place in private employment is one of the most important tasks facing the country and one of the greatest sources of uncertainty in the national business outlook. From the successful solution of this problem more than any other, depends the future of the nation.

The principal economic problem that faces the country as it enters 1937 is that of possible expansion in the field of money and credit, states The National Bureau. If the public finances can be promptly placed on a sound basis, if the problem of credit expansion can be satisfactorily solved, and if a further expansion can be maintained between the government and business, there is ground for the confidence with which business in general apparently views the outlook for continued recovery.

INDEPENDENCE FOR WHAT?

An organization of American Ukrainians has recently adopted a resolution demanding that the 45,000,000 Ukrainians now living under Russian, Polish, Rumanian and Czechoslovakian sovereignty receive their independence. The continued peace of Southeastern Europe, they said, depended upon the "complete independence of the Ukrainians."

Maybe. But wouldn't it depend still more on what they did with their complete independence? If they immediately set up trade barriers against the nations of which they were recently parts, joined the European armaments race, established military border fortifications and set men to marching, nothing would be accomplished for peace. That is what "self-determination of peoples" has degenerated to, from its lofty ideal of independent nations governed according to their own choice of cooperating with other independent nations for mutual peace and prosperity.

FREE DISCUSSION

American newspapers, whatever their faults, are the freest in the world, printing the most news and doing it most fearlessly and impartially. And perhaps in no other country is there so much free speech in the form of discussion and debate on public issues.

There are an astonishing number of organizations doing this kind of thing today, airing and debating all sorts of questions in freedom and impartiality, for their own interest and a sense of public duty. One of these is the Cleveland City Club, which listens to exponents of all shades of political, social and economic thought and then mercilessly cross-examines them, while a radio audience listens. The principles involved are thus set forth by Paul Bellamy, son of the famous Edward Bellamy and retiring president of the club:

America stands forth pre-eminently as the shining example of successful, militant, untainted democracy. To maintain it, it seems to me, the only way is to preserve the soil in which democracy grows. The component elements of this soil are free speech, free discussion, a reasonable tolerance of each other's views and a spirit of give-and-take. We must make a conscious effort to retain democracy, and one of the best ways to maintain it is to encourage free and open expression of opinion in such forums as these.

Blessed are free and untainted democrats (including republicans) who "have what it takes" to get together in this way and thresh things out.

THE OLD YEAR PASSES OUT

As the old year passes away it is only natural that you look back on it with mixed feelings. You are a year older which doesn't seem much unless you are past the half-way mark of life. In which case you may be considering the wisdom of budgeting the limited number of years that are likely to be yours.

When you were younger you were looking ahead, now that you are older you are looking behind on the year just past, and planning for a fuller, better year.

As you think for the oncoming year, you have your own plans in dim or clear outline and expect to complete them as the days come and go.

Now, your health, to a certain degree, depends upon what kind of body your parents, grandparents and all your ancestors gave you. Thus just as some motor cars have but four cylinders and others have twelve, but both do the work of which they are capable, so will that body of yours do the kind and the amount of work of which it is capable.

However, just as any simple accident or defect in a car—not enough air in the tires, lack of water or oil, a run-down battery—can interfere with the working and greatly reduce the power and effectiveness of a high or low priced car, so can simple defects of the body—headache, toothache, indigestion, constipation, frequent colds—upset all the plans of work, play and happiness, even in the most rugged body.

The point then is that you can't choose your ancestors, you must take the body that was given you, and by simple, common-sense living habits get all the power that body of yours can give.

There are just three things to do to get the most in life from the body that was given you.

Wings For Sally

by BAILEY WOLFE

SYNOPSIS: Philip Page, young publisher of the Warrenton Courier, rescues attractive Sally Warren, the society editor, from the hunting lodge where she had been imprisoned by Giles Benton, an unscrupulous detective, because she knew too much about his scheming. Philip and Sally have saved McDonald, a mill worker, from Benton's false charges. Anxious as a lover when he finds Sally at the lodge, Philip changes to a cold severity as he takes her home. Wealthy Mary Morris, Sally's friend, has been pursuing Philip.

Chapter 45

Accusations

AS Sally entered the hall with dragging steps, her father rose from his armchair stiffly.

"Sally!" She ran to him and hugged him tightly. He patted her head. "My dear, if you only knew what hours of suffering you've caused me, you'd never do this again."

"I promise never to be kidnapped again," said Sally tremulously. Then, at the sight of his amazed expression, Sally drew him down in the chair, again and sat on his knee while she told him her adventures.

It was nearly daylight when they went to bed. Sally set her alarm for eight, and fell into the deep sleep of complete exhaustion. Next morning she scarcely paused for breakfast, leaving her father to make the explanation they had agreed upon to her stepmother. One thing she did pause for—a look at the morning paper.

Philip had spread his news in big type across the front page: McDONALD INNOCENT OF ARSON—CONFESSION OF SAM WELLS SHOWS McDONALD VICTIM OF FRAME-UP—MORRIS HIRSD DETECTIVE WHO FORGOT McDONALD.

There was no mention of the blackmail charge. Sally guessed that Philip would try to hush that part of the affair for Mary's sake.

At the office, the McDonald case had the spotlight. Telephone calls poured in all day. Philip Page had one visitor after another.

Not until she had read the paper thoroughly, did Sally learn of Mr. Morris' illness. She called Mary immediately, but Dennison said Mary had given orders not to disturb her.

Mary Pours Out Her Rage

THAT evening, after supper, Mary visited Sally. She came in wearing a simple dark blue lace frock. There were dark circles under her eyes, and she wore little make-up.

"Mother and Joe, Jr., are getting in tonight," Mary told Mrs. Warren. In answer to her inquiries, "Dad's worlds better, but he'll have to be careful—the rest of his life." Mary's lips quivered. "I want to talk to Sally," she added. "Do you mind if we go out in the garden—alone?"

When the two girls were established under the apple tree, Mary sat silent a moment. Her face hardened and her eyes grew hostile.

"I know where you were, Sally, yesterday when Dad was taken ill. I know who I have to thank for the shock that brought on his stroke—and for that story spread across the paper today—that story that attacks Dad when he's ill and can't defend himself."

"What on earth are you saying, Mary?" cried Sally. "I didn't do anything to your father. Philip Page wrote the story, but it's all true—every word of it. Philip doesn't want to hurt your father. He only wants to clear McDonald."

"You can't defend Philip to me!" cried Mary. "Philip and I understand each other. We have for a long time—ever since you left our house. I was a fool not to realize that Philip was standing between me and my father."

"I stand between Philip and you?" Sally was so bewildered at the array of accusations Mary had flung at her that she could not think clearly enough to defend herself against any of them.

"I can forgive you for that," said Mary in a softer voice. "After all, we've been friends for a long, long time. I understand that you love Philip and I don't blame you for trying to get him. I did the same thing. But I can't forgive you for bringing your wretched McDonald case to Dad, threatening him with telling what you knew, and making him ill."

"Who told you I did that?" asked Sally quietly.

" weren't you there just before he had the stroke? Didn't you make him angry, so that the servants bore him quarrel?"

"We did get angry with each other," said Sally. "But not because I threatened him."

"I don't believe you," said Mary stubbornly.

"It was Giles Benton who threatened him," Sally went on. "The last people he saw before he became ill were Giles Benton and a woman, who had come to extort money for some letters of his she had."

"Giles was his friend. Perhaps Giles did wrong, as Philip says, while he was working for Dad. But wasn't Dad's fault. And Giles was his friend."

"I heard the whole quarrel between Giles and your father," said Sally. "Your father was terribly upset. 'There is only your word for that,' persisted Mary. 'Poor Giles is gone and there is no one to defend him.' 'Let him come back and defend himself!' cried Sally hotly. 'He's wanted by the police now.' 'Thanks to you,' answered Mary. 'You uncovered the whole terrible mess. But for you, it would never have got to Philip, even. And you did it for a man you didn't even know. What's McDonald to you that you sacrifice your old friends for him?' 'I didn't think of it that way,' said Sally in a low voice. She lifted her head. 'I believe McDonald was innocent, and I wanted to get justice for him.'"

"And to get justice, or what you think is justice, you've stooped to spying on your friends. You've never once looked at it from Dad's side—"

"Stop!" cried Sally. "You have no right to come here and accuse me like this. If you and Philip understand each other so well, go to him and ask him to tell you everything. He'll tell you exactly what I did and why. Perhaps you'll believe him."

"I certainly never trust you again," said Mary.

She got up, adjusted her hat and went down the walk toward the garden gate. Sally did not try to say goodby. She was too stunned by Mary's attack—too angry at the deliberate twisting of facts.

The longer Sally thought about the whole visit of Mary, the angrier she became. She was also puzzled. Mary was far too intelligent to believe that half the things she said were true. Apparently she had come simply to make Sally angry with her.

Sally choked back tears of anger and humiliation. She heard the gate click and saw the light in the hammock, for fear it should be Mary returning.

It was plump old Aunt Dora, the colored woman who looked after Philip Page's house across the way. Aunt Dora held a plate covered with a snowy napkin, and she was coming toward Sally.

'A Wife And Child'

SALLY dabbed at her eyes with a handkerchief. Aunt Dora was such an old friend it was hard to hide secrets from her.

"How you, Miss Sally!" Aunt Dora called out. "Glad to see you takin' a little rest. You been lookin' mighty thin and peaked lately."

"I'm all right," said Sally. "Here's a little something for you, honey," said Aunt Dora, offering the plate. "When I was bakin' this evenin' seem like I got to thinkin' about you. Put me in mind of when you was a little feller and I was cookin' for your Ma. You used to pull at my skirt-tail and beg for a little pie."

"Why, it's a mess pie!" Sally uncovered the plate and revealed the little golden brown tarts. "I haven't seen one in years!"

"Polks don't bake like they used to," sighed Aunt Dora. "Always buyin' in their somethin' to eat at the stores, 'dy-made."

"You can't get pies like these at the bakery," said Sally. "You were sweet to think about me, Aunt Dora."

"A body likes to cook for them that appreciate good eatin'," said Aunt Dora. "Mr. Philip, though, seem like he don't relish his victuals any more. House is too lonesome, I reckon." Aunt Dora sighed. "Needs a woman and chillen to fill it up."

"Mr. Philip's pretty busy these days," said Sally, keeping her eyes on the plate. "He doesn't want to be bothered by—by a family."

"Huh!" sniffed Aunt Dora. "He do a heap more work did he have him a wife and chillen. Wouldn't have womenfolks callin' him on the phone all day long." Aunt Dora got up to go. "You come across to see me chile. You ain't set foot in our house for a many a day."

"I'll run over one of these days," promised Sally.

She watched Aunt Dora go down the path and cross the street. If her own conjectures were right, Aunt Dora would have a new mistress soon. She wondered how Mary Morris would get along with Aunt Dora. Certainly she would never be content to let the old colored woman rule the kitchen. There would be many servants in the old Page house if Mary took charge.

"Hey, Sal! You're wanted on the phone!" Ray called from the house. She hoped it was Philip.

"How's your evening, Sally—filled up?" It was Bob Davies, Mary Morris' most persistent admirer. Sally concealed her disappointment.

"I'm just being lazy. Doing nothing at all."

"Then how about going over to the roof garden to dance?"

"I'd like to. Give me half an hour or so to improve myself and I'll be ready."

Sally knew that Bob had probably been to see Mary and that she had refused to go with him. That was natural enough. Mary's father was ill and Mary was certainly in no mood for dancing. At any rate, Sally was free to go. She had no further responsibilities toward Mary. Dancing the evening away with Bob was certainly better than moping about the house waiting for Philip to call her.

A sudden meeting with Philip and Sally's blood racing tomorrow.

Test 2,000 Herds In U. S. Program

Ithaca, Dec. 31.—The federal report of Bang's disease elimination for December 1 shows that 2,040 herds have been tested in New York state. About two-thirds of these herds, or 1,489, have had one retest. These figures include only those cattle tested under contract with the Federal government; for these reactors, dairymen receive indemnities, according to George Pringle of the state college of agriculture.

Herds that have had the initial test contain 46,387 cows, of which 7,289, or slightly more than 16 per cent, reacted to the test. Farmers are under contract to slaughter the reacting animals.

New York state has had 10,049 reactors on which the Federal government has paid or will pay indemnities. Dairymen who have signed to have their herds tested for Bang's disease under this plan receive $20 for reacting grade animals and $50 for reacting purebred animals, in addition to salvage value.

Mr. Pringle urges farmers to have a private test before signing a contract with the government to receive indemnities. This is no reflection against the indemnity payment plan, he says, but merely a safeguard should the individual farmer have a large number of reactors among good cows. It may be more advantageous to the farmer, he says, to sell these cows gradually; then, by following a good disease control program, he can build a clean herd by raising heifers.

The proportion of reactors in a herd can be materially reduced by removing the reactors, Mr. Pringle says that only 3.8 per cent of the cattle retested the first time reacted as compared with the 16.1 per cent in the initial test. Good herd management and disease control practices must be followed, however, to get and maintain a clean herd. A mere removal of reactors does not insure Bang's disease-free herd.

Mr. Pringle says further that many other states are ahead of New York in this work. New York dairymen have been slow to blood-test and to adopt control measures because of better markets for milk and surplus stock. They are in danger of losing these markets, especially the surplus stock sales, if they do not keep pace with the work in other states, he points out.

A Washington Daybook

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—People who remember Senator Copeland of New York mainly because he writes a health column and wears a red carnation in his lapel may be surprised to learn that he also is the most prolific bill-plugger in the senate.

During the past congress he introduced 420 bills, almost double the 240 of his nearest competitor, Senator Sheppard of Texas.

Copeland's bills, like those of other senators, are made up mostly of "private" bills concerned with minor claims, small bridges and harbor repairs. Aside from those, however, he probably has more big iron in the fire at one time than any senator.

All during the last congress he labored with an heir to the famed "Tugwell food and drugs bill" publishers disliked. It failed of passage but doubtless he will bring it up again.

Gets Heavyweight Staff
WITH equal persistence he worried his commerce committee and congress with a ship subsidy bill. That passed, finally, but will be up for revision this session. Many ship men will have none of it.

The big food control bill that ranged in amount at different times from $250,000,000 to $700,000,000 was another of his pets. The commerce committee, of which he is chairman, had still others, including the chain store tax.

When plugging one of his bills, Copeland talks in a conversational monotone, almost devoid of sprightly lines. He holds an audience in the senate, however, because his bills usually are loaded with legislative pins and needles for fellow members. Almost every senator had a letter or telegram from somebody important at home demanding changes in the food and drug bill. Same with ship subsidy. Even more so with food control.

His legislative virtuosity amazes newspapermen who can't understand how so much heavy-weight legislation drops into his hands.

He has a rounded family-physician face (he is a physician, and likes to be called doctor) and a head of hair washed to an unrivaled bluish whiteness. He could be talked into running for mayor of New York City if conditions were right.

Holt Had Fewest

WHILE we were looking up Copeland's bills we found also that "Baby" Senator Holt introduced fewest bills last congress. There was just one, seeking to investigate WPA in West Virginia which Holt charges has been converted into a political machine by his colleague, Senator Neely. Neely introduced 143. The late Senator Long introduced nine bills, and Mrs. Long, who finished out for him, three more.

Senator Robinson, majority leader, put in 100. Tops among the senate freshmen was Senator Schwellenbach of Washington with 110. Senator Bilbo of Mississippi had 15, the last one of which proposed installing loud speakers in the senate chamber. The senate, content with the loud speakers it has, didn't install any.

TALKS TO PARENTS

Well-Rounded Minds
By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

Whatever form of work a child plans to undertake, it is acknowledged that his body must be completely developed. It would occur to no one that because he plans to go into a sedentary profession, his physical training should be neglected or onerous.

Even specialized physical work like dancing or piano playing or painting, which depends on the cultivation of particular muscular aptitudes, is never used as an excuse for failing to develop the rest of the body. Parents and teachers know that to neglect one part of the body is to injure it all.

Why not follow the same plan in training the mind? Because a boy proposes to be an engineer is no reason to neglect his artistic training. An engineer who understands literature, knows history and can appreciate music and art, is not only a happier and more complete person, but will probably be a better engineer.

No real study is wasted if it goes far enough and is a search for truth. Knowledge is all related, as the true scholar knows, and the time spent on research of any kind, whether it be in Greek roots or algebraic formulas, is of value, if only to broaden and deepen the mind and spirit.

The desire to earn a living, and especially the eagerness to make lots of money quickly has blinded many of us to the real purpose of life. After all, the necessities of food, shelter and clothing have been provided, a well-furnished mind and an appreciation of the true and beautiful are far more important than cars and service.

"Seek ye first the things of the spirit." The rest follows. Only when parents learn this lesson and hold it up to their children as an ideal, will well-rounded minds and spirits dwell in the physical perfection we are achieving.

Hollywood

Sights And Sounds

By Robin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Margaret Lindsay of Dubuque, Ia., who once pretended with profit an English origin, is working now in a typically American picture, called "Slim."

Middle-western Margaret is opposite two middle-western boys named Pat O'Brien (Wisconsin) and Henry Fonda (Nebraska). The story is William Wilder Haines' account Margaret Lindsay of perils and romance in construction of those magic steel towers which bring power across deserts, mountains and prairies to the home.

Iowa's Peggy Kies fooled Hollywood by getting a role in the "all-English cast" of "Cavalcade." Her success therein established her firmly enough that it didn't matter, some time later, when her real origin was revealed. She dropped her affected English accent, and nobody cared.

Praises 'Iowa Sense'

If the accent got her into pictures, she thinks now, it was her "good old-fashioned Iowa sense" that has kept her in.

"I've all but forgotten the English experience," she says. "When I have a new role to play, I find myself thinking of someone I knew in Iowa, rather than England, as the type of character I am to portray."

Does Hollywood resent being deceived? Scarcely. Look at Robert Cummings, who put Margaret Lindsay up to her "great deception." Cummings, like Margaret, went to England and returned with a manufactured fame as a British juvenile. As an American boy, New York stage producers overlooked him. But as a young English actor he was snapped up. In Hollywood, he was considered English at first, but it made no difference when the truth came out. He is doing very well.

He Gets Fooled

C. B. DeMille is practically Dean of the Deceived. Jean Williams, disguised as Sonia Karlov, exotic blonde, had won a role in "The Volga Boatman" until DeMille was tipped off. Later, the director's search for a "virginal Diana" resulted in selection of a mysterious miss named Mari Colman, who after the picture was made let it be known she was wife of the wrestler Gus Sonnenberg. As Judith Allen she has pursued a fairly successful career.

And the players are myriad who, confronted with Hollywood's demands for "experience," have put over the vague but satisfactory: "Oh, stuck in the middle west."

Business Borrowings Set Record As '36 Rates Sink To New Low

By FRANK MACMILLAN

(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York (AP)—Money was offered almost for a song in 1936 and there were plenty of corporate borrowers to take it while the price was right.

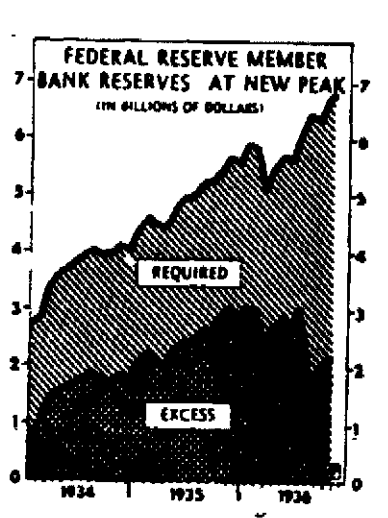

More money was borrowed by corporations at long term in the past year than at any time since 1930. The rates were more reasonable, probably, than for any similar period in the country's history, and certainly were the lowest in modern times.

For that reason corporations by the score redeemed outstanding bonds on which they were obligated to pay relatively high interest rates and replaced them with others conforming to the state of the money-glutted investment market.

Landis Hails Change

The situation was given succinct expression by Chairman James M. Landis, of the Securities Exchange Commission, when he said in December:

"Only two years ago our concern lay with the absence of capital issues, sagging markets and a frightened and embittered public. Today one thinks in terms of a wholly reversed situation—rapidly rising markets, expanding volume and an apparently insatiable demand for capital issues."

Reserves of federal reserve banks above the legal minimum have continued to expand steadily since 1934, as this chart shows.

One of the chief beneficiaries of the loan-hunger of investors was the federal government. It wound up the main part of the year's program with a $700,000,000 offering, maturing in 15 to 17 years, at interest of 2½ per cent, the lowest in the government's history for an ordinary long term issue.

With money heaped up in the hands of bond buyers, especially banks and insurance companies, most

Banks Swollen With Reserves

So great was the money current in America, that reserves held by the banks in excess of their legal requirements with the federal reserve system late in 1936 topped $2,000,000,000. The huge total, while well below the more than $3,000,000,000 of the early part of the year, stood despite a 50 per cent hike in reserve requirements which went into effect in August by reserve board order.

Long term obligations of corporations floated during the year amounted to $3,500,000,000 or more. Of this, better than $2,700,000,000 was to refund outstanding paper and over $700,000,000 was additional borrowing. The year before, roundly $2,000,000,000 was borrowed, and less than $300,000,000 was new capital.

Government Benefits

One of the chief beneficiaries of the loan-hunger of investors was the federal government. It wound up the main part of the year's program with a $700,000,000 offering, maturing in 15 to 17 years, at interest of 2½ per cent, the lowest in the government's history for an ordinary long term issue.

With money heaped up in the hands of bond buyers, especially banks and insurance companies, most of the statistical series of price averages of high grade bonds reached record peaks.

Railroad bonds showed percentage gains in the bond market, because of improving traffic, and because they had been most depression-hit. Industrials, which staged their big uprush earlier in the recovery, were relatively slower. Utilities, in the shadow of TVA and holding company decisions from the courts, progressed slowly. Foreign government issues exhibited mixed trends, with the Europeans held down in many cases by the war menace, and Latin Americans responding rather well late in the year to improved economic conditions to the south.

Fame of Escoffier

According to the Bible, the man who is diligent in business will stand before kings; Escoffier is proof of the accuracy of this proverb. Despite his lowly origin—he was the son of the village blacksmith—he attended to his job so well that he not only stood before kings; they even became his friends.

History of Past Year in Kingston

The Freeman, as usual, on New Year's Day, will publish a history of the past year in Kingston and Ulster county. Events that made the news during the past year will be given briefly in a day by day record, as well as the deaths, marriages and fires that have occurred in Kingston and Ulster county during 1936. The greater part of the history of the past year is taken from the columns of The Freeman, while the account of marriages, deaths and fires in the city are from the official city records.

In addition to the history of the year The Freeman will carry Mayor Heiselman's annual message to the Common Council as well as an account of the meeting of the aldermen on New Year's Day.

Many readers of The Freeman value the New Year's Day issue for its historical interest, and keep copies of The Freeman's yearly history for their files.

HIGH FALLS

High Falls, Dec. 30.—Among those who spent a merry Christmas at the Steen home were Mrs. Sybil Maxon and son, Ambrose, of Hurley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pratt, Mrs. Kate Pratt, Mrs. May E. Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pratt and daughter, Vivian, of Stone Ridge, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Cox of Poughkeepsie, Francis Wager of Nanuet, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Barrett and son, Stanley, of High Falls.

The December meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Festus Yeaple on Tuesday with eight in attendance. The subject was "Christmas" and the selections read were well chosen, telling of the reason for the observance of the day, and on need of its observance; also of the way the day is spent where the workers are in the home and foreign service. Christmas stocking book-marks were given as souvenirs. It was a most enjoyable meeting due to all taking part.

Mrs. Clementine Stokes was in New Paltz with her niece, Mrs. Edmund Curtis, on Christmas Day.

Friends are glad to hear that the Rev. T. S. Brathwaite of Shokan, who has been very ill for some time, is much improved and able to sit up a few hours each day. He has many loyal friends at High Falls, having supplied the pulpit of the Reformed Church several years.

CONGRESSIONAL PREVIEW

Here Are Major Problems Facing Legislators Convening January 5

RELIEF

For relief the balance of the fiscal year, congress must decide between a $500,000,000 recommendation expected from President Roosevelt, who has a balanced budget plan in mind, and $150,000,000 reported sought by WPA Administrator Hopkins.

WAGES, TAXES

Proposals to aid labor include lowering of business and a copy of the old NRA. Others, to help business would raise the undistributed corporate profits tax.

REFUNDATION

Shifting and proving of government offices is due for considerable attention. Recommendations from three investment groups: The President's own, the senate, and the house, probably will be forwarded to the legislative committee in the coming. F. B. I. provided recommendations as early as 1932.

CURRENCY CONTROL

The President's power to change gold content of the dollar, and the $1,000,000,000 stabilization fund set up as a result, both expire January 30, 1937, unless extended by congress. Congress predicted an extension.

FARM AID

Farm tenancy, crop insurance, and possible revision of soil conservation act are major points to be considered in an adjustment of the farm program. Special committees are at work on recommendations.

TRADE

The present authority under which 15 reciprocal trade pacts have been negotiated expires June 12, 1937, but the administration expects it will be renewed.

NEUTRALITY

The present neutrality law, used in the Ethiopian war, expires May 1. Indications are that it may be succeeded by a new and permanent law with greater powers concentrated in the President for keeping America out of European wars.

Demonstrates New Talking Machines For Use by the Blind

Mat Arnow of New Rochelle, chairman of the Lions Club activities for the blind in this district, was present at the meeting of the Kingston Lions Club this week and gave a demonstration of the new talking machines and "talking books" which are to be furnished to the blind through the Lions Club.

These all electric machines and book records are especially made for use by the blind. They can be used with earphones if desired. Mr. Arnow demonstrated one of 34 records which contain the complete novel "The Tale of Two Cities." It is stated that a great many of the classics as well as many modern novels and stories are already prepared for use on these machines. The usual entertainment records may also be secured.

The local club has contracted to take 10 of these new machines for distribution to the blind in this territory. It is expected that the machines will be distributed in New York state through service clubs and like organizations.

Gotham Will Glow As New Year Enters

Broadway as the major domos of entertainment strained every effort to provide New Yorkers with newer and noisier fun.

Prices ranged slightly upward, in most cases above the levels of a year ago, but hotels, theaters and night clubs experienced a rush for reservations that promised a sell-out of space even with the increased accommodations provided.

Times Square merchants boarded up their windows as protection against the press of the crowd that gathers there traditionally. Police made arrangements to handle an outpouring of a million or more persons in the mid-town area.

Well Above 10 Millions

The New York Times estimated the cost of New York's party may run well above $10,000,000.

New York and Chicago night spots were prepared to entertain patrons until well into the morning with breakfasts free in some places to those who stay that long. Extra supplies of liquor and cordials were laid in.

Neighborhood liquor stores reported booming sales presaging a wide consumption of festive "spirits" and a possible bumper crop of morning-after ills.

Entertainment prospects ranged from the flamboyant girl shows on Broadway to a full-regiment circus under canvas in a Park avenue hotel.

The annual watch night services in the great cathedrals and churches provided a more sober note that will appeal to thousands who will see the New Year in quietly.

Many High Spots For Local Revelers

New Year's eve celebrations tonight are expected to surpass any since the boom days, and commercial places, offering varied programs, all will be crowded according to reservation lists, and besides private parties should reach a new high it is augured.

Approximately 25 resorts in Kingston and surrounding territory have obtained all-night licenses, and others, allowed under the law to remain open until 3 a. m., expect gaiety to last right up to the last minute. Liquor stores and other provision centers report big orders for private parties, and these affairs are expected to be numerous and glorious for the ushering in of 1937.

Through newspaper advertisements, the commercial places of entertainment have sought patronage, and results indicate that the invitations to make reservations early were effective, practically all of the grills, restaurants, etc., having their quotas filled.

Local theatres are advertising midnight shows, offering attractive features of the silver screen, for those who want to be up for the introduction of the New Year, but desire participation in a more quiet welcome party than those with programs of dancing and other forms of merry-making.

Capital Will Be Quiet New Year's

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP).—Little Mr. New Year will arrive at the capital in a burst of midnight gaiety, but he'll have time on his hands tomorrow.

He will be welcome at the White House, to be sure, but he can't take everybody with him as he did in the old days.

The traditional free-for-all reception which for more than 100 years was a nucleus for the New Year celebration here will not be revived for the 1937 cherub.

President Roosevelt, who abandoned the handshaking levee when he took office, plans a quiet family observance.

Postmaster General Farley gave his reception for 1,200 employees in his panelled office yesterday, so that he and Mrs. Farley can spend January 1 in New York.

If New Year's Day will be quiet, New Year's Eve should be all the noisier, capital residents argue.

The largest party will be Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean's ball at Friendship, her estate on the edge of the city. The house has been enlarged for the occasion, and half a floor at a hotel has been reserved for out of town guests.

"Devil Traps"

Within living memory in provincial England the doorsteps of numerous houses, shops and hotels were chalked each morning with a pattern of loops which were supposed to entangle the feet of the devil if he tried to enter the premises. One of these "devil traps," notes a writer in Collier's Weekly, may be seen in the west entrance of the great Ely cathedral where it was permanently inscribed in the floor many centuries ago.

POLITICS at Random

ALL attempts to chart the administration's probable course on labor and industrial legislation have bumped up against a barrier of Presidential silence which would seem to be deliberate rather than accidental. Whatever he may be thinking personally, Mr. Roosevelt manifestly is in no hurry to disclose his program, either to congress or to his associates.

Administration stalwarts in the senate, however, have been hurrying to the front with schemes, both old and new, to aid labor. Many of these have had Mr. Roosevelt's approval in the past and undoubtedly will again. Guffey, for the third time, will introduce a bill to maintain prices in the soft coal industry. Black will be back with his act to limit workers to a 30-hour week; O'Mahoney will have a licensing bill for all corporations engaged in interstate commerce; and Wagner will propose a huge housing program. That is only a start.

Labor leaders view the situation with more complacency than do business executives. Both in public and in private they have said confidently that they expect administration support for most of their measures. Their first problem, however, is to consolidate gains already made and to find some common ground of their own.

F.D.R. Can Afford To Wait

FACTORS apart from the immediate past must be considered in any thorough analysis of the reasons for Mr. Roosevelt's silence. Some months ago he called upon business for greater cooperation in reducing unemployment.

Not much came of this, other than a tart exchange of ideas, and the government's relief burden remained heavy.

Since then, however, trade levies have forged steadily higher with special dividends and bonuses marking a welcome change from the slump fare of depression years. Thus business could not as well plead poverty when the President turned again to its leaders in mid-November and asked for a report on what should be done about wages, working conditions and unemployment.

The second request was made to the advisory council sponsored by Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper, which is a who's who of business and finance in miniature. This time there were no sharp rejoinders. Instead the council accepted "the responsibilities placed upon us" and started to work. That augurs well for a more harmonious working out of the problems.

It also means that Mr. Roosevelt has called directly upon business for a solution. He is willing to bide his time until a reply is made. The council knows full well that its report is not the only one which will reach the President's desk. Another will come from Major George L. Berry's group, composed mainly of small business men and labor leaders, and recommendations from organized labor are inevitable.

By BYRON PRICE

Chief Of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington

Labor In Good Position

THAT suggests two avenues of approach for the council, a conservative stand or one sufficiently liberal to stave off more radical proposals of other groups. A too conservative report might have a reverse effect and smother any chance for a middle-of-the-road program. The President probably will weigh one recommendation against another, and he is in a good position to bargain.

One phase of the labor program must mark time for the supreme court, for in February the justices are scheduled to hear arguments on cases involving the right of labor to collective bargaining. The President can go ahead on minimum wages and maximum hours as he sees fit. But on this he must wait.

An adverse decision might alter the entire program, even result in a constitutional amendment proposal. Mr. Roosevelt is definitely committed to the theory of collective bargaining and undoubtedly will take whatever steps are necessary. On the other hand, a favorable ruling might make further action unnecessary.

In thinking over what the year may hold for the working man, it is well to remember that labor was an important source of strength for Mr. Roosevelt in the November election. That might have a bearing upon whom he will call to his side for advice, now that the time for legislative action is here.

Drivers' Licenses Good For 3 Years On New Application

The new law authorizing the issuance of automobile drivers' licenses for three year periods will become effective Saturday, January 2, insofar as original drivers' licenses is concerned. Effective January 2 all persons applying for original drivers' licenses must submit their application accompanied by a $2 fee. The licenses then issued will be valid for a period of three years.

Commissioner Harnett said, "It must be made clear to the motoring public that this new law will not affect the present holders of motor vehicle licenses until such licenses expire on May 31. At that time, when applying for renewals, they will receive the new three-year form. There will be no change at present in the licenses issued to chauffeurs or junior operators."

The persons affected on January 2, Mr. Harnett said, are those who, for the first time, will apply for operators' licenses.

The commissioner asserted the new rule will be of great convenience to drivers.

Convenience Increased

"At various times," he said, "my attention has been called to the short duration of the present license. With this new type of license, operators will be assured of a three-year period of driving uninterrupted by renewals unless they are convicted of violations of the vehicle and traffic law which warrants revocation or suspension of their license." Also on Saturday the Motor Vehicle Bureau will begin its campaign for early distribution of 1937 registration plates.

"The Legislature passed the bill extending the time limit for procuring license plates to February 1, to give motorists an extra month after the holiday season," Deputy Commissioner Carroll Mealey said. "We plan to open our campaign after the festivities are over."

years. However, one of his relatives lives very near to me. He was a sugar wholesaler."

"Yes, that was the man," replied the native, staring with questioning eyes at Prof. Bennett. The two men continued walking across the rolling hills and his next question to Prof. Bennett was nearly a challenge.

"I suppose you have heard of another American I am interested in," he said pointedly. "His name is Smiley."

"Smiley?" asked Prof. Bennett. "Why certainly I know Mr. Smiley. He runs a mountain hotel very near my home. Is there anyone else in America you are interested in?"

"There is another man," the Scotchman said quietly and after considerable thought. "America is a big country and you probably don't know him. Or do you? He's a black man. He calls himself God."

"Yes, I know of him," said Prof. Bennett. "For his cult operates very near my home. Like the other men you have mentioned, he is a neighbor of mine."

The native walked along beside Prof. Bennett, a sad, uncertain light in his eyes. He said nothing but it was easy to see he was under a great emotional strain.

Prof. Bennett started the conversation moving again by asking if there was anyone else in the United States who interested him.

The man thought for several minutes and then he beamed in the knowledge that he had at last found an answer that was certain to prove the vastness of America.

"There is one more man," he said brightly, "who interests me greatly. He is President Roosevelt."

"Oh, certainly," explained Prof. Bennett. "He lives right across the river from me. We class him as a neighbor of ours."

So ended Prof. Bennett's conversational piece. He failed to explain what happened to the Scotchman, whether he died of despondency or whether he got out a map of the United States and circled New Paltz and vicinity as the cradle of American life.

Tugwell "Goes" Molasses

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—Rexford G. Tugwell, one of the last of the original Roosevelt "brain trust," leaves the administration's "little cabinet" today to enter the molasses business in New York. Stepping out of his dual role of undersecretary of agriculture and resettlement administrator, he issued, as his last official act, a "gag" rule against agriculture department workers talking to their former colleagues—including himself—about government business and pending legislation.

Today
Broadway: "Polo Joe." Joe E. Brown goes back to the reason for his popularity in the comedy at the Broadway for Mr. Brown has always been effective in the role of a braggart and this show is no exception. Playing the role of a harmless and likable sap, he returns to the United States after years in the Orient to see that polo is the thing his set is playing. Afraid of horses he nevertheless less explains that he is a polo player of marvelous ability in order to get the attention of a girl he falls in love with. As to his other plays, the villain makes him prove it and this part of the play is as funny as anything seen on the screen in some time. Mr. Brown's cast includes: Carol Hughes, Skeets Gallagher, Gordon Elliott, Fay Holden and George E. Stone. A Warner Brothers picture directed by William McGann.

Kingston: "Come Closer Folks" and "Everything Is Thunder." How an old fashioned, slowly decaying department store in a small town is rejuvenated by a progressive and aggressive young salesman is interestingly brought to the Kingston screen.

In "Come Closer Folks," a study in modern merchandising with James Dunn starred and supported by Martin Marsh, Wynne Gibson, Herman Bing, Gene Lockhart and Gene Morgan. A Columbia picture directed by D. Ross Lederman. "Everything Is Thunder" is heavy melodrama, filled with suspense and gripping action as it describes the activities of a lady of the streets who shelters a man in Berlin only to discover that he has escaped from a prison camp. This show bears the Gaumont-British name, which assures a mystifying and well directed performance. Americans in the cast are Constance Bennett and Douglas Montgomery and Oscar Homoloka of Vienna is also starred in the production.

Orpheum: "Ceiling Zero." With so many airplane disasters in the news today, this show is especially appropriate as it shows the perils and dangers confronting the commercial air pilot in his trek across the skyways with his human cargo. For rain, visibility and storms are a few of his problems and he finds them all in this show, one of the most exciting airplane pictures on record. Taken from the stage play of the same name, the movie version far exceeds the legitimate play in visual effects and scope. Here is blood unting melodrama, done with a gusto by James Cagney and Pat O'Brien.

Tomorrow

Broadway: "Born to Dance." The Eleanore Powell, who worked so hard entertaining her movie public that she suffered a nervous breakdown, returns to the screen as a full fledged star in this dressed up extravaganza of a small town girl who comes to the big city seeking fame as a dancer. She falls in with nice people and falls in love with a sailor but circumstances make it seem as though he really doesn't care and this state of affairs continues through most of the show until love overcomes the handicaps of the plot. The story isn't important anyway but Miss Powell's dancing is the big thing.

and she proves her reputation in a series of sparkling dance routines. The entire show is lavishly presented, with music by Cole Porter, dances directed by David Gould and the entire show was under the guidance of Roy Del Ruth. A fine cast supports Miss Powell and includes James Stewart, Virginia Bruce, Una Merkel, Sid Silvers, Buddy Ebsen, Frances Langford, Raymond Walburn and Alan Dinehart. Here is tops in musical entertainment with hitting songs, spectacular dances and grand comedy.

Kingston: "Three Men on a Horse." One of Broadway's funniest and most popular comedy successes becomes enjoyable screen fare at the Kingston Theatre, the riotous story of a greeting card writer who also possesses an uncanny ability to pick winners in horse races. So good is he at this business that same small time gamblers persuade him to pick winners and they skyrocket to riches on his choices. The chances for comedy are so obvious in this show that the play is almost solid laughter from start to finish. The cast offers such capable performers as Frank McHugh, Joan Blondell, Guy Kibbee, Carol Hughes, Anne Jenkins, Sam Levene, Edgar Kennedy and Teddy Hart. A Warner Brothers picture directed by Marvin LeRoy.

Orpheum: "Hate Off" and "Song of the Gringo." The Orpheum offers full length double feature program as part of its New Year entertainment program, the first a comedy attraction featuring Mae Clarke and John Wayne, the second a romantic musical number starring Tex Ritter. Selected short subjects complete the bill.

Forty million dollars is invested in irrigation systems for sugar fields in Hawaii.

Makes Models Realistic

An Italian painter of ancient days painting a picture of a saint in agony, would tie up his model very tightly to get the expression on his face. A friend of his, doubting he could get the correct expression, one day, rushed in, brandished a knife at the tied model, and shouted: "Now, I've got you; prepare for death!" The model, thinking himself a dead man, struggled to loosen his bonds, and in his panic fear represented vividly the horror of death in his face and in his distorted limbs. "There," said the artist's friend, "that is how he should be; the rest you must do yourself."

Biggest Prison Hails 500 Drop As 'Sure Index' Of Better Times

NEW YEAR'S AT SAN QUENTIN
More than 5,000 convicts jammed into a great hall of the California state prison last New Year's to celebrate at the annual show. This picture and others shown here were taken by prisoners.

By SAM JACKSON

San Quentin, Calif. (AP)—The biggest penitentiary in the country is about to lose that rating and is glad of it.

A drop of nearly 500 in the population of the California State prison here is hailed by Warden Court Smith as a sure index of better times and more jobs.

The inmates are now down to 5,232, after running well over 6,000 during the worst of the depression, and San Quentin hopes soon to hand over the rank of "biggest" to some institution in the east. New York, Illinois and Ohio have more convicts on hand than California, but they are split up among more institutions.

California has only two places for male felons—San Quentin for first timers, Folsom for repeaters.

Alcatraz "Small-Time"
Despite the celebrity of Alcatraz, which lies out in the bay not far from the state prison, the government's Devil Island is just a small-time jail compared with the "big business" going on at San Quentin.

The latter requires two immense dining rooms, one seating 3,000 men, the other 2,000, to feed its inmates. No cafeteria routine delays meals. The prisoners are waited on at their tables and an orchestra plays for all meals except breakfast.

Once each day the diners get beans. This is not an economy diet, but is demanded by the large proportion of Mexican convicts.

Largest Cell Block
It takes three free employees and 300 inmates to run the mess hall, which uses 125 pounds of coffee a meal, 1,500 loaves of bread a day.

At night some 2,000 men sleep in the largest single cell block in the world, containing 1,000 cells. The studios ones can cram on school courses, taking their choice of 250 in the prison curriculum. One hundred and twenty better educated convicts have jobs as instructors.

It takes five doctors and two dentists to look after the health of San Quentin inmates, although the administration is proud of the fact the hospital list averages only 75.

Work In Mill First

Principal industry at San Quentin is a huge mill, which imports the raw plant from India and turns out 20,000 sacks a day. They are sold direct to farmers, scrupulously kept out of the hands of middlemen.

Regardless of what prison job he eventually falls into, every newcomer has his head clipped and spends his first 12 months in the juke mill.

Under Warden Smith, the dungeon has been closed and the most extreme punishment inflicted is solitary confinement. Desire to work up into a "good job" in one of the prison's shops or in its farms or gardens is credited chiefly with keeping the prisoners in line. These are 275 guards.

A safety valve is provided by Warden Smith, who patiently interviews any convict who wishes to see him.

In cases of prison grudges, he lets the two opponents put on boxing gloves and go after each other in view of their fellows.

Location An Accident

San Quentin's strategic position on a peninsula jutting out into San Francisco Bay was chosen largely by accident.

In the gold rush days were kept on a prison ship under private contract. As the lure of easy money brought in riffraff from the seven seas, it became necessary to house some on shore, and these first buildings formed the nucleus of what is now a big walled city.

Even if economic conditions do not erase its undesired pre-eminence, San Quentin is due to drop the word "biggest" in the course of a few years. California has decided to build a second prison in the Los Angeles area and the prison population will be divided.
